"Man's Store Make" Clothes.

The Label That Stands for Honest Quality.

We want you to become familiar with the significance of the label "M. S. M." ("Man's Store Make") in clothing—the label that stands for the best clothing made in America—our own exclusive production.

Every piece of cloth, every piece of lining is examined and tested by us—every detail in the design or manufacture, the style, the technique of finish passes our exacting demands.

From the woven cloth to the finished garment, each production is OUR CONCEPTION—OUR REALIZATION. We stand by them—they have been reared by us. We have proven every detail—we only adopt that which is best.

As a result, "M. S. M." Clothing is produced under the most systematic economical methods. The expense of intermediate handling is obliterated. Our relationship to its manufacture gives you "M. S. M."—the best clothing—always at a saving. Remember, "M. S. M." is the "MAN'S STORE MAKE"—to be found only at the MAN'S STORE. Every garment is the result of our energy from start to finish.

You will find clothes elsewhere, but here only will you find the "M. S. M." the best ready-to-wear clothing, the highest results of careful thought, personal energy, skilled labor, and expert workmanship.

PREFERS SUICIDE TO LONG ILLNESS

Threatened with Tetanus,
Clerk Drowns Himself.

JUMPS INTO POTOMAC RIVER

Harry P. Lashhorn, Seeking End of His Troubles, Leaves Note to Sister, Saying He Could Not Die of Blood Poisoning—Body Recovered by the Crew of the Police Boat Vigilant.

Seeking a quick death in the waters of the Potomac rather than face suffering from tetanus, Harry P. Lashhorn, twenty-four years old, clerk in the Auditor's Office of the Treasury Department, yesterday committed suicide by drowning himself.

The young man evidently planned his end carefully, for a note which he left showed that his act was not the result of a rash determination. When he left his mother and two sisters at their home, 102 P street northwest, in the morning, it was with a cheery face and a pleasant word. No one but himself knew he was not going to work, but to death.

Gave No Intimation.

He had never made an intimation that he would take his own life so far as his family knew, but his mother and sisters knew he was despondent because of the ill health which had been worrying him for several months.

About three weeks ago Lashhorn cut his hand while opening a tin can. The wound caused him trouble. Two operations were performed, and physicians told him he must be careful of the cut to prevent blood poisoning.

From his home Lashhorn probably went to the arsenal. He saw no friends and did not visit his physician, so far as has been learned. Writing a note, he placed it in a pocket of his coat. His hat and the coat he placed on the sea wall at the junction of the Potomac with the James Creek Canal.

No one saw the young man leap to his death. About 1 o'clock in the afternoon Stephen F. Stella and Harry Lee were walking on the sea wall. They found a man's hat and coat. In a pocket of the coat was found a note, which read:

Dear Jessie: I have committed suicide down by the arsenal. Don't let mother worry. Try to comfort her. I cannot work and I have been in bad health long enough. May God have mercy on me. I cannot die of blood poisoning. Your brother, HARRY.

P. S.—I jumped overboard near the little red house.

Police Find Body.

The police were notified, and at 6 o'clock the crew of the police boat Vigilant recovered the body near the spot where Lashhorn leaped in the water. There was a cut on the left hand, slightly discolored, which showed why the clerk had feared tetanus.

Jessie Lashhorn, silver buyer for a well-known jewelry firm in Washington, went to the morgue and identified the body as her brother. Coroner Nevitt allowed the body to be removed to an undertaking establishment. The coroner will probably issue a certificate of death to-day. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

STEENERSON GIVES NAMES.

First Hearing on Ship Subsidy Conspiracy Charge Is Held.

Representative Steenerson, of Minnesota, author of the resolution charging that improper methods have been adopted to force the passage of a subsidy by Congress, yesterday appeared before the subcommittee of the House Committee on the Judiciary. Mr. Steenerson introduced a lot of letters intended to show that members had been intimidated, and that campaigns had been inaugurated in various districts to defeat members who opposed or withheld their support from subsidy legislation.

Mr. Steenerson was prepared to submit to the subcommittee a list of men whom he desired to be subpoenaed as witnesses to testify as to the facts. He was informed that the subcommittee had no power to subpoena witnesses. It is the purpose of Mr. Steenerson to request the appearance of Representatives Kustermann and Lenroot, of Wisconsin, both of whom he declares have evidence tending to show that the Merchant Marine League threatened with defeat those who opposed ship subsidy.

JAPANESE GAME RAIDED.

Police Take Five Asiatics in Custody at Midnight.

Masahichi Iriye, a twenty-nine-year-old Japanese, was arrested at 12:30 o'clock this morning, charged with allowing gambling on his premises. Detective Howes and Patrolman Messer, of the First precinct, raided his rooms at Twelfth and D streets northwest.

Four other Japanese were taken into custody, and were released later to appear as witnesses against Iriye. The police say a poker game was in progress when they arrived.

Executors Sued for $40,000.
Ernest Gerstenberg and Mary H. Dies, executors of the Philip H. Dies estate, were sued yesterday by Thomas H. Milson for $40,000. Milson says he paid the estate $35,000 for shares in the Dies Pump Company when it was represented to him that he could dispose of the same for a much larger sum. After purchasing the stock, Milson has been unable to find the prospective buyer.

Indiana's Funeral Delayed.

The bodies of Bay-Bum and A-Ni, the Chippewa Indians who were appraised at Halladay House, in Third street, Friday morning, will be shipped to Org. Youth Held on Forgery Charge.

George T. Dutrow, nineteen years old, who lives at 609 Third street northeast, will be arraigned in Police Court to-morrow morning on a charge of forging his mother's signature to six checks, aggregating $300, and cashing them at a Washington bank. Detective Evans and O'Dea, who have been searching for Dutrow for several days, traced him to the lobby of the Lexington Hotel, Baltimore, where he was arrested by Detectives Burns and Busick.

CLUBS WILL CHANGE

Republican League to Acquire Pennsylvania Home.

DEFINITE ACTION THURSDAY

Political Organization Which Existed for Years Under the Leadership of W. R. Andrews About to Pass Out of Existence—New Quarters to Be Used by Societies.

The Pennsylvania Club here, which for years was a flourishing organization, with Col. Wesley R. Andrews as president, is to lose its fine clubhouse in Franklin square within scarcely a month of its death.

Preliminary arrangements have been completed by which the handsomely furnished quarters will be turned over to the District of Columbia League of Republican Clubs, for the joint use of the seventeen State organizations which will hereafter be affiliated in support of the headquarters. The Pennsylvania Club will merge into the general alliance, and will thus have to bear only its proportionate share of the expense.

Interest Has Lagged.

Formal ratification of this plan is expected at special meetings of the two organizations next Thursday. This was admitted by George L. Whitford, corresponding secretary of the league, who said:

"Our members are practically agreed upon this move. The present quarters are inadequate, and when the suggestion came from the Pennsylvania Club that this arrangement might be made, it was accepted, subject to ratification, at the first opportunity, which will probably be Thursday."

At the Pennsylvania Club, Charles Meyers, chairman of the house committee, said the club's future will be discussed Thursday night, but would not forecast the decision. Since Col. Andrews' death there has been uncertainty as to the club's continuance in a fine clubhouse, as a falling off in membership was feared.

Forced to Move.

For several years the club was located at Fifteenth and K streets, opposite the Department of Justice. Society neighbors prevented granting of a liquor license, but the place was maintained until a year ago, when it was relinquished to the Mexican Embassy for offices and the new quarters fitted up.

Congressmen Huff and J. Hampton Moore are vice presidents of the club, which has been one of the most active, politically and socially, of all the State organizations at the National Capital.

SOUTHERN BAZAAR SUCCESS

Enterprise Is Brought to a Close in a Blaze of Glory.

Champ Clark, Minority Leader of House, Speaks at Missouri Conditions During War.

Amid a burst of oratory, the bewitching strains of the waltz, the cries of the auctioneers, the various stands, the spinning of the wheel of fortune, and the beguiling smiles of the South's most beautiful daughters, the Southern bazaar, which has been in progress a week at old Masonic Temple, was last evening brought to a close in a blaze of glory. A considerable sum will be turned over to the Confederate Memorial Home.

It was designated as Missouri, Texas, and Arkansas night, and the crowd, which was the greatest of the week, was Southern in every respect. Champ Clark, minority leader of the House, made the address of the evening. He was introduced by Perry M. DeLeon, treasurer of the Bazaar Association, who congratulated Mrs. C. D. Merwin, the director general, to whose efforts the success of the bazaar was largely due.

Representative Clark was most happy in his remarks, dealing with conditions that prevailed in Missouri during the civil war. "It was dangerous, some days, to be pronounced a Northerner," he said. "Some days it was dangerous to be an advocate of the South, and at all times it was dangerous to be astride of the fence."

Evidently he thought those conditions had changed and there was no longer trouble in the middle course, for he strongly complimented the generals who fought on both sides.

The various booths did a thriving business, as did the lunch room, the gypsy tent, and all other features of the enterprise. It may be several days before the final figures are determined, but Mrs. Merwin, the director general, is authority for the statement that they will be able to turn over to the fund a much larger sum than the most sanguine expected.

ABANDONED BABY FOUND IN CHURCH

Wails of Infant Hidden in Dark Led to Discovery.

TINY GIRL LEFT IN BASKET

Little One Evidently Displeased with Surroundings in the Fifth Precinct Station Cried So Hard Policemen Took Turns Trying to Quiet Her—In Silk and Linen.

An infant girl, about three days old, was abandoned in the vestibule of St. Peter's Catholic Church, Second and C streets southeast, last night shortly before 8 o'clock.

Policemen of the Fifth precinct are trying to find the parents of the baby or the person who abandoned it, although there is not a clue.

Heard Faint Wailing.

Members of the congregation at worship in the church heard the faint wailing of an infant about 8 o'clock. It was thought the child was in the arms of some one standing at the door or passing the church. When the cries were prolonged several persons near the rear of the church left the pews and went out to investigate.

In a dark corner of the vestibule was a basket of the style commonly used by grocers to deliver goods. The cries seemed to come from the basket, and when the searchers advanced to the secluded corner, they saw the basket was filled with something white.

A match was lighted and the faint glare of the burning sulphur revealed the pink and white face of a baby, peeping over the swaddling clothes in which she had been wrapped. The baby was not uncomfortable, and apparently had been in the vestibule only a few minutes. She seemed to object to the dark and cried lustily.

One of the women lifted the infant in her arms and carried her in the light. The baby stopped crying and nestled contentedly in the arms of her benefactress. It was thought the parents or caretaker of the infant were near, and a search was made. In a short time those who discovered the basket realized that the baby had been abandoned.

The little bundle of lace, silk, linen, and flannel was carried in the priest's house, where it was crooned to sleep, while a telephone call was sent to the police. Serg. R. W. Montgomery appeared in a short time and took charge of the infant. The baby cried as soon as she was delivered from the arms of the woman who had held her, but the sergeant soon succeeded in quieting her.

Carried to Station.

Carrying the baby on his left arm, and with his baton in his right hand, Montgomery walked to the Fifth precinct station with his precious charge, delivering her to the custody of Lieut. Duvall with much ceremony.

A hurry call was sent for a District nurse, as the baby was not pleased with its surroundings, and cried mightily for her two or three days' experience. Duvall and Montgomery took turns cooling and soothing the white bundle, which concerned all but the face and tiny hands of the baby.

KERN URGES HARMONY.

The Former Democratic Candidate Wants Jefferson Day Observed.

The following letter has been received in Washington from John W. Kern, Democratic candidate for Vice President at the last election:

"The banquet to be given at Indianapolis on Jefferson's birthday is not a counter demonstration to any of the other numerous banquets and meetings that will occur on that date in the various sections of the country. The committees which are arranging for the banquet here are made up of our best Democrats, and the question of Bryan or anti-Bryan has not been considered or thought of—all being actuated by the one desire to promote harmony and aid in bringing about a Democratic victory.

"For myself, I hope Jefferson's birthday may be celebrated by Democrats in every part of the United States. The proposition that a few Democrats in Indianapolis or the city of Washington have such a monopoly of the day that rivalry must be presumed because of banquets at both places is so superlatively ridiculous as to require no comment. The article in question also quotes me as predicting a complete reorganization of parties in which the Bryan partisans will gather under the banners of Cummins and La Follette. You know, and so does every other man who has associated with me in politics, that I never made any such prediction. I would be glad to see true reformers like La Follette marching under the banner of true Democracy, but I want to die before the colors of the old Democratic party of Jefferson are lowered, or that splendid organization lose its identity or name.

"Referring to another statement in question, I may add that I am in no sense a moving spirit in arranging for the Indianapolis banquet, and will not be one of the speakers. I am now engaged in practicing law and have little time for demonstrations or counter demonstrations of a political character. But you may be sure that I am as steadfast in my adherence to Democratic principles and as hopeful of ultimate Democratic triumph as I have ever been.

"With kind personal regards, I am,
"Very truly yours,
"JOHN W. KERN."
